PREAMBLE

This is the 8th instalment of the International Conference on Law and Society (ICLAS), the finest instalment to date. Nevertheless this conference would not be as it is now without the enduring commitment and support from all the partner universities, namely Fatih Sultan Mehmet Vakif University, Universitas Muhammadiyah Yogyakarta, Universiti Sultan ZainalAbidin, Istanbul University, Istanbul Medeniyet University and Suleyman Demirel University. From its first debut in February 2013 in Universitas Muhammadiyah Yogyakarta, the 3rd instalment was hosted by Istanbul University, for the 8th instalment we return to Istanbul, the crossroads of civilisation, spreads in 2 continents – Asia and Europe.

The ICLAS conference, as this conference fondly referred to, was envisioned not merely to be a place of presenting academic papers but more so to be a place of forging relationship between academics and universities. The conference was purposely made to attract a broad spectrum of specialists from different area of law, together with budding academics. This somewhat generalist framework of the conference has its detractors but it fit the founding purpose of the conference – namely to build relationship so that further meeting of minds and academic activities could materialise irrespective of specialisation. It is more than obvious that the objective is achieved. Happily we could note that from ICLAS we have student exchange programmes, from ICLAS we have visiting professors, and from ICLAS we have inter-institution research and authorship involving universities participating in ICLAS.

The theme for this conference is Law in the Digitalization Era. The spread of digitalization in the life of many is undeniable when Artificial Intelligence (AI), cloud services and digital lifestyle entered into ordinary discussion even without us noticing. It is certainly an apt decision made by the host, Fatih Sultan Mehmet Vakif University in choosing this theme. The abstracts that organiser received show the ability of specialists from different area of law to examine their area from the perspective of the theme of the conference. The challenge poses by the somewhat specific and narrow theme seems not to overwhelm any of the presenters.

It is our hope that what we have built will continue to prosper. An International Centre for Law and Society as an accompanying formalised platform is being proposed to sustain the conference, the relationship it creates and to reap further benefit from such collaboration.

I would like to thank Fatih Sultan Mehmet Vakif University (FSMVU), the Rector Prof. Dr. M Fatih Andi, for agreeing to host the 8th instalment of ICLAS, and Dr. Murat Oruc for agreeing to be the Chair. It is not an easy task to organise an international conference, and I have to thank the team from FSMVU, including Dr. Naim Demirel, Miss Bedia Tekin and Mr Serdar Cop for their hard work.

It is my ardent hope that we could meet in many activities to come under ICLAS and it continues to be able to benefit the universities, the academics and the wider community that we must serve.

PREFACE

Dear colleagues,

We are pleased to organize the 8th International Conference on Law and Society (ICLAS) in Istanbul, Turkey, the beautiful city of cross cultures.

Hosted by Fatih Sultan Mehmet Vakıf University, this year ICLAS 2019 is held under the theme of “Law in the Digitalization Era”. The idea of the theme of the conference is arising from the fact that the digitalization is expeditiously spreading to all the fields of life and it has become an undeniable phenomenon of today’s world. This new phenomenon has also brought new problems, necessities, and new facts that the field of law needs to involve in. Therefore, we aim to monitor and discuss the new challenges to the field of law in this new digitalization era and propose new solutions accordingly.

The conference brings together many academics from different countries from Southeast Asia to Europe, and offers an opportunity for them to meet and discuss such contemporary academic issues under the framework of the conference, which is held in a global metropolitan basin like Istanbul.

I would like to thank all the members of ICLAS organizing committee, scientific committee and student staff for their hard work. Special thanks go to Prof. Dr. Farid Sufian Shuaib, Mr. Serdar öp, Mr. Mustafa Zafer Küçükkurt, Mr. Erol Öz and sponsors for their cooperation and support.

Following the success stories of the previous ICLAS experiences, we hope to contribute to the academic knowledge in this field and carry the ICLAS experience further for the upcoming conferences and other academic works.

Yours sincerely,

Murat Oruç
